An Engraving is in preparation by a first-rate Artist, from a beautiful design by HARRADEN, representing the whole party at dinner with the Parochial banners, the Rotunda, Orchestra, and a view of Cambridge in the back ground. The whole will form a most interesting picture, and will be sold at 3*s.* and 5*s.* each, plain, or 8*s.* coloured.

INTRODUCTION.

TO THE PUBLIC.

It will naturally be expected that I should give some reasons for publishing this my first work. The following are my reasons :—From the commencement of the proceedings when I was chosen Secretary, my intention was to give the public an account of whatever might take place which I considered worth recording. This fact I can prove, by reference to a gentleman, a printer and publisher of this town, to whom I spoke immediately after my appointment, and I then stated to him, “ if I continue Secretary, my intention is to publish the proceedings, and to give every man his due.” There can, therefore, be no mistake as to my original intentions ; and I mention this fact as it may tend to throw some light on other circumstances which ultimately transpired.

My next reason is, that, being appointed to the arduous post of Honorary Secretary, a post which must necessarily involve very considerable trouble and care, anxiety and responsibility, on that individual, whoever he might be, that undertook it, I considered, if any one had a right to publish, that right belonged to me. But if this my opinion be incorrect, at least as a matter of courtesy, if any honour was to be obtained, the offer of publishing ought to have been first made to him who did the most work. Precedents in this case must necessarily be few. I know of only ONE, and that is the Peace Festival. On that memorable occasion Mr. John Sharp was Honorary Secretary, and the present Sir John Mortlock (who was Mayor for the time being) Chairman of all the meetings, Chairman of the Committee, and also at the Dinner. All the documents were left with him as Secretary ; he was never even requested by the Chairman or the Committee to give them up ; he has them in his possession now ; but declining to publish, he lent the manuscript to Mr. Gibson, who published the “ Account of the Peace Festival.” So much for precedent. Another reason is, that I had given Messrs. Stevenson and Deighton notice, on the Monday previous to the day on which the “ Committee for publishing” was formed, of this my intention. I first asked Mr. Stevenson, in the presence of Mr. J. J. Deighton and others, whether he intended to publish ? To this question no positive answer was given. I then said, “ whatever may be your intentions, I will not deceive you, my intention is to publish ; this was my intention from the first.”

The following morning, whilst I was particularly engaged in the Commissioners’ room on the Union-street question, the Rev. G. Spence brought forward a motion to appoint a Committee to publish, &c. My name was placed on that Committee, not only without my consent, but against it. The gentleman who was sent by the Committee to ask whether I would agree to be placed on the Publication Committee, was authorized by me to state most positively that on no conditions would I consent to be a “ joint publisher ;” and this he told the Committee. As soon as it was possible for me to leave the Commissioners' room, I inquired of the Chairman, Geo. Fisher, Esq., what resolution had been passed in my absence? The resolution was then read; and I immediately stated to the whole meeting my determination not to be on the "Committee for publishing;" at the same time expressing an opinion, that a liberty had been taken with me in placing my name on a Committee against my consent; and I also required my name to be withdrawn. Notwithstanding this, on Monday July 2nd, six days after, a hand-bill was circulated, with the names of the "Publishing Committee," mine included. This handbill was dated back, June 26; and yet the names of two gentlemen who were published in this bill were actually not chosen on the Committee till the day after, June 27th! These gentlemen were Alderman E. Foster and Mr. Luke Jones, of Queen's. Was I to be made a tool of in this manner, especially after I had given notice to those two gentlemen of my intentions? They knew little of me who thought thus to silence me. The next step was to obtain possession of the minute-book; and I received a note, signed by the Chairman, requesting me to send the minute-book, to "assist the Committee in compiling their work." Now, I beg particular attention to this part of the case.—Ever since Mr. Stevenson was appointed Assistant Secretary, (an appointment, by the way, which was made without consulting my feelings or wishes, or even naming it to me,) duplicate books had been kept of the proceedings; and both the Chairman and Assistant Secretary have always had the book I kept, when required; and from what I have seen, there can be no material variation between the two—certainly nothing to prevent their authorized publication being completed without my book. I did not, therefore, think proper to give up the book, but I offered them a copy of it, offered to compare it with Mr. Stevenson's, or do any thing else the Committee might require to aid their publication ; except only not to deprive myself of the means of publishing—which perhaps might have been the case, had I given up the book. Have I done right or wrong ?—I leave the public to answer this question also.

Since writing the above, I have received a note from the Chairman of the Committee, Geo. Fisher, Esq., in answer to one written by me to inquire who was responsible for the publication of the handbill containing the names of the “ Publication Committee,” mine included. I had previously inquired of several members of that Committee, and was referred to the Chairman ;—the answer was, “ the Publication Committee consider you to be a bona fide member of that Committee, and therefore by attending their meetings, you have every opportunity afforded of obtaining all the information you may require.” This answer was in Mr. Stevenson’s hand-writing, signed, “ Geo. Fisher, Chairman.” So then, it appears, man is no longer a free agent. If he happens to join a Committee for general purposes, and undertakes the office of Secretary, his volition is gone ; he must hereafter “ move as he is moved !” Because the Chairman and Secretary “ are considered entitled to attend the meetings of the different Sub-Committees (and these are the words of the resolution in Mr. Stevenson’s hand-writing), the said Secretary must therefore, ex necessitate, belong to any Sub-Committee on which it may suit the convenience of certain persons not only to place him against his consent, but to retain him in spite of his personal protest against it !” To such shifts are these gentlemen driven to justify their conduct. If this argument can be maintained by any or all of them, they are certainly one and all fully qualified for the office of "Casuistical Professor;" and I advise them to be candidates whenever the Chair is again vacant. Let any man who values his independence beware of becoming Secretary under such circumstances. I have had a lesson which will teach me wisdom in this particular. "Once bit, twice shy: and never more will I be caught in a "Conservative Conciliation Trap." It is very probable that this work will bring down the vengeance of more than one individual, in the shape of an answer. If that answer be signed by the person who writes, or the individual who may be sponsor to the production, I am good for a reply;—but I shall not condescend to notice anonymous scribblers.

It was impossible for me to suppose, when I wrote this small work, that a second edition would be so soon called for. But the first edition of 750 copies having been nearly all disposed of, I take leave to present a second edition to the public, which will be found considerably improved, both in appearance and matter, and former errors corrected. The first edition was too hastily got up, and had, moreover, the disadvantage of being printed with two different types. An Index is also added to this, besides an additional List of Subscriptions, which was omitted in the first edition. The Bill of Sports is also added, which, to those who have a taste that way, will be a treat of a rare kind. I have only to observe, in reply to an advertisement issued by the "Publication Committee," (who still retain the Secretary's name, although he never was a member of that Committee,) that although they pretend to give the "only authentic and authorized account of the Festival, yet the public will find this work quite as authentic, quite as impartial, and, I trust, as much read and approved, as the authorized work about to emanate from the "Publication Committee." Both parties have the same materials to work from, and it is for the public to judge which makes the best use of them.

An article in the Cambridge Chronicle of July 7th, (evidently written by authority) attempts to justify the conduct of the Publication Committee in placing and retaining my name on that Committee against my consent. Take the following extract as a specimen of Conservative reasoning on this point:—

“ As a misconception prevails about retaining Mr. Hallack’s name upon the Publication Committee, and inserting it in the hand-bill that has been put forth, we beg to state, that we know, from authority upon which we can rely, that in so doing, there was not the slightest thought or intention of annoying him; but it was the unanimous opinion of that Committee that, in consequence of Mr. Hallack’s name having been inserted therein by the General Committee, they had no power to withdraw it, or they would most readily have complied with his wishes. It will be in the recollection of those who were present when this Sub-Committee was appointed, that Mr. Hallack was named on it in his official capacity as one of the Secretaries, and that, upon his expressing a disinclination to act upon it, his name would have then been withdrawn, had not two of his most intimate friends assured the meeting, that, in their belief, Mr. Hallack would, upon further consideration, be induced to co-operate with the other gentlemen.”

Whatever might be the opinion of the friends of mine alluded to, that opinion ought not to have weighed a feather in the scale, after my express determination not to have any thing to do with the Publication Committee; my declared intention being to publish. However, the public will appreciate this conduct, which was nothing more nor less than an attempt to stop my publication; and after the first edition was out a fortnight, the Chairman of the Publication Committee wrote me a note, requesting my attendance. One might almost suppose, that this authorized work, about to emanate from the “Committee,” could not be brought forth without my assistance. But we shall see.

I shall not pretend to argue the point with the writer in the Chronicle, as to the “right and propriety” of my retaining the “minute-book of proceedings,” the value of which can be merely the price of the book—as duplicate copies of the proceedings are in the possession of the Committee; and if the copies are not literally accurate, that is the fault of those who refused to take the copies which I offered, or to have their book compared with mine. The real object was, to get possession of the minutes, to prevent my publication. However, this scheme did not succeed. I will now give a few extracts from the Cambridge Chronicle, both before and after the Festival, to show the consistency and good faith of some of the Conservative managers who have the directing that journal; for I do not for a moment blame my friend, Charles Edward Brown, the Editor, for any of the leaders in his paper. The first extract is from May 26th.

“We cannot suppose the Conservatives of Cambridge stand so nicely on points of ceremony, that the preliminary difficulty could not be easily got over, which at present attends a satisfactory arrangement of the details of any plan that might be proposed; a difficulty which has arisen from the Town Council—a body steeped and glorying in party prejudice—having taken upon itself the initiative, where every thing ought to have been settled by the public deliberations of a meeting of the Burgesses, called together by the Mayor, on a proper requisition. But this undue assumption on the part of the Town Council we by no means conceive to be the greatest obstacle in the way of such an arrangement as might secure the end in view, and yet avoid interfering with political prejudices or prepossessions,— there is, first of all, the question of precedence to be satisfactorily adjusted.

“ But supposing the uncalled-for interference of the Town Council to have been got over, and the little difficulties of precedence arranged, which, among persons of sense and understanding would soon be managed, still the greatest difficulty of all remains behind: What set of toasts, we should like to know, would be equally palatable to the Conservative and the liberal? Exempli gratia, here are two lists; which, good reader, do you prefer? On which side will you fight? ‘Under which king, Bezonian, speak! ’ ”

1. The Queen, may she long reign over her loyal and affectionate people.	1. The Queen, may she long place confidence in her present Ministers!
[unlimited applause.]	[tumultuous applause.]
2. The Queen Dowager, and the rest of the Royal Family.	2. The Duke of Sussex, and the others of the Royal Family now living in England.
3. Our glorious Constitution in Church and State.	3. Her Majesty’s Ministers, and the cause of Dissent.
4. The Duke of Wellington, and the Army and Navy.	4. Sir G. De Lacy Evans, K. C. B., and our gallant fellow Patriots lately in arms in Canada.
5. The House of Lords, and their privileges.	5. The expulsion of the (Tory) Bishops from the House of Lords.
6. Sir Robert Peel, and the Conservative Members of the House of Commons.	6. Lord John Russell, and the extension of “Liberal” principles!
7. Two Members for the County, and the Two for the University.	7. The Two Members for the Town, and One for the County.

Thus it will be understood that, though we are as desirous as any one can be for a general celebration of the auspicious day on which her gracious Majesty first wears the British crown, a mixed celebration, in the present state of political parties in Cambridge, is in our opinion impracticable :—that is, impracticable to any good purpose. We are firmly persuaded, that both comfort and effect will be best consulted by the two great parties in the town at least dining apart.— The numbers and wealth of each are amply sufficient to form two respectable and well-attended convivial meetings ; there are separate rooms to be had for each ; and it is manifest, that where no reserve is requisite in the expression of opinion, there only will there be real unanimity and enjoyment ! But what enjoyment can there be where perfect unanimity is wanting ? and what is an entertainment if it be not enjoyed ? On whichever side we look at this business, we are the more convinced, that there must be two dinners, not one, in Cambridge, if the Coronation is to be celebrated in a manner worthy of the occasion.”

Extract, June 2nd :—

“ Before we go to press we have only just time to say, that the meeting called together by the Mayor for determining the best method which can be adopted for celebrating the Coronation, has in nowise interfered with the necessity for each of the two great parties in the town having a separate public dinner on that occasion ; we suggested a public meeting and it has taken place, though thinly attended, we confess. We suggested some festive proceedings for the poorer classes, which are immediately to be attended to, and we hope will be generally encouraged.

“ It will be seen that no final arrangement was come to, except that of doing away with an illumination. The members of the Committee are to meet on Monday next, and we are assured that nothing will be definitely agreed to by the Conservatives without the general wishes of the party being consulted.”

Extract, June 23rd :—

“ Having been the first, we believe, to suggest a general festival for our less wealthy neighbours, in the execution of which all party feeling might be merged in the desire to promote a general expression of loyalty and allegiance to the Crown, sans toasts, sans speeches ; and having all along encouraged to the utmost extent of our humble means the harmony and concord now so happily prevailing and directed to that end, we take peculiar pleasure in observing the complete success of the scheme, as far as it is at present developed ”

From the above extracts, it is evidently intended that the public should believe a “ general Festival ” was first promoted by the Conservatives. How does this square with the fact that on Thursday evening, the 14th of June, it was resolved, at a meeting of Conservatives, held at the Eagle, that they would “ adhere to the original resolution of DINING IN PARISHES or DISTRICTS ? ”

Of course, those gentlemen of the Conservative party who voted for a general dinner at this meeting, are not intended to be included. However, the very day after the Coronation, the Conservatives dined together at the Eagle, being determined that no union of the respectable portions of the two parties should take place, by having a public dinner together at the Town Hall, as the Mayor proposed at the outset.

Again, on July 7th, the next week after the Coronation, the party feeling of the Conservatives breaks out in the Chronicle as follows :

“ Now that the grand pageant of the Coronation, with all its attendant restrictions upon the Englishman’s right of grumbling at his political troubles, is passed away, we propose to direct the attention of our fellow-burgesses once more to the absurd and expensive litigation to which they are constantly made assenting parties through the perverse spirit of their representatives in the Town-Council.”

Can any further proof be wanting that the union (so called) of parties, and the harmony and concord spoken of by the Chronicle, was only a hollow truce, and gladly broken by some of the Conservative leaders the moment opportunity offered. However, the honourable exception applies to a great many gentlemen of the party, who acted from the first bona fide, and from the best motives.

PROCEEDINGS, &c.

THE recent Entertainment given on Parker's Piece, on Thursday, June 28th, 1838, the Coronation Day of her most Gracious Majesty Queen Victoria, on which occasion upwards of 14,000 persons dined together, may be justly considered an event to which the inhabitants of this Town and their posterity may always refer with mingled feelings of pride and pleasure. Whether we consider the extent of the entertainment, the order and regularity with which it was conducted, the utmost harmony which prevailed, when high and low, rich and poor, united together, and above all the satisfaction given to every one, not a murmur or even a whisper of dissatisfaction having been heard, we may safely deem it an occurrence almost unrivalled in the annals of public festivity. It would seem that Providence vouchsafed its special smiles on that auspicious day, for which we ought to be abundantly thankful. The previous days of the week had been, more or less, rainy—and the day after the Coronation, (Friday,) had it happened on that day, just at the period the multitude would have been seated at the entertainment, a tempest came on; the rain descended in torrents, the thunder roared, the lightnings flashed, and who can say what confusion and consequences might have ensued to the vast assemblage of affrighted women and children.

To trace the causes which led to this successful termination—to give an impartial account of the proceedings which took place at the various meetings—and to give to every one who took part in the necessary arrangements, which ultimately produced such a glorious result, his fair share of the merit and honour due to him, will be my earnest endeavour in the present work. The honour of first mooting the question of a public celebration of the Coronation, as far as the writer recollects, is due to Mr. Elliot Smith. This gentleman brought the subject before the Town Council, and proposed a public dinner at the Town Hall. The Mayor and several other gentlemen offered suggestions on the occasion, and Mr. Livett proposed it to take place on Parker's Piece; ultimately a "Committee was appointed, to consider the best mode of celebrating the event." Nothing, however, worthy of notice arose from this Committee. It was generally considered the better plan to take the sense of the Town by calling a public meeting; and a General Meeting of the inhabitants was called by the Mayor at the Town-Hall, on Tuesday, June 5th, 1838. The result of this meeting was the formation of a "General Committee," consisting of two of the respectable inhabitants of every parish, except Barnwell, for which six were appointed, who were chosen as nearly as possible equally from both parties, Reformers and Conservatives; thus showing in the very outset, a disposition to merge all party difference on this interesting occasion, and to think of nothing but loyalty and attachment to the Queen, and good feeling to one another.

The following gentlemen were chosen on the original Committee:—Messrs. Skrine, J. P. Twiss, Bartlett, H. S. Foster, Brimley, and Capt. Purchas, for Barnwell; Messrs. Stevenson and Hallack, for Great St. Mary's; Messrs.

Deighton and Warwicker, for St. Michael's; Alderman Headly and Mr. J. Law, for All Saints; Messrs. J. J. Deighton and Knightly, for St. Benedict; Messrs. G. Fisher and Elliston, for St. Edward's; Messrs. C. Claydon and W. Swann, Jun., for Trinity; Messrs. Beales and Hall, for St. Botolph; Messrs. Rowley and Ashton, for St. Giles; Messrs. Lestourgeon and Litchfield, for St. Sepulchre's; Alderman Nutter and Mr. Hazard, for St. Mary the Less; Messrs. Catling and Peters, for St. Peter's; Messrs. Warren and Bond, for St. Clement's; and Messrs. Searle and Woodley, for St. Andrew the Great.

This Committee held their first meeting at the Town-Hall on Tuesday, June 5th, at eleven o'clock, at which the following gentlemen were present: Alderman Headly and J. Nutter, Messrs. Searle, G. Fisher, Beales, Hallack, J. J. Deighton, Warren, Elliston, W. Swann, Jun., Peters, Catling, Hazard, Litchfield, Stevenson, Rowley, Skrine, J. Deighton, T. Nutter, and Lestourgeon. The first business of the Committee was the election of a Chairman; and here it is proper to observe that the Secretary requested two gentlemen present to propose G. Fisher, Esq., who was ultimately proposed; that he spoke in favour of the motion, and that, after several other gentlemen had expressed their concurrence, Mr. Fisher was unanimously elected "Chairman of the Committee." The next consideration for the Committee was the appointment of a Secretary. Several gentlemen were requested to take the office, and refused; at length the author was unanimously appointed Honorary Secretary. The term Honorary is used as it is customary, and to distinguish the office from that of a paid Secretary. If on such an occasion the author had not been actuated by an earnest wish to waive politics, and prevent any appearance of party feeling, he could not possibly have acted as he did. This is the best proof that can be given of his intentions. There were two gentlemen present, both of the same principles with himself, who, from their rank as magistrates, were entitled to precedence, and to neither of whom, had they been proposed to the chair, is it likely any objection would have been made. Besides, the Mayor, who was absent, by virtue of his office ought to have been elected Chairman; and some apology is certainly due to that gentleman, for passing him by on that occasion. But it was with no intention to slight his feelings, that this was done, but rather as an offering of peace, and to give the conservative party no cause for complaint.

Thus constituted, the Committee immediately set to work, and passed the following resolutions:—

1st.—Moved by Alderman Headly; seconded by Mr. Skrine: “That this Meeting is of opinion that the Poorer Classes of the Town should participate in the general joy of commemorating the Coronation.”

2nd.—Moved by Mr. J. J. Deighton; seconded by Mr. Beales: “That it being deemed impracticable to have one general meeting, the Entertainments be given in such divisions as may hereafter be considered desirable.”

3rd.—Moved by Mr. John Deighton; seconded by Mr. Skrine: “That a Subscription be raised for the purposes of the general Entertainments, and further to afford assistance to such persons as may be prevented by illness or otherwise from attending the Entertainments.”

4th.—Moved by Mr. Stevenson; seconded by Mr. William Swann, Jun.:

“That the Minister and Churchwardens of each parish be requested to join this Committee, and that the Inhabitants generally be invited to co-operate in carrying into effect the objects contemplated.”

5th.—“That the Parochial Committees be requested to ascertain the probable number of poor persons who may want tickets, and report thereon to the next meeting, and that this meeting be adjourned to Wednesday next at eleven o'clock.”

At an adjourned meeting of the Committee, held this day, at the Town-Hall, to receive the report of the Parochial Committees, it appeared, from the calculations of the Ministers and Parish Officers, that the probable number of persons likely to partake of the Entertainments, would not be less than 10,000.

Proposed by the Rev. Mr. Baines, and seconded by Mr. Beales :
" That the above Resolutions be adopted and printed."

GEORGE FISHER, Chairman,
THOS. HALLACK, Secretary.

On the following day, Wednesday, June 6th, at eleven, the Committee, (increased in numbers by the Minister and Churchwardens of every parish, according to the resolution of the previous day,) held their second meeting, "to receive the Report of the parochial Committees" from which it appeared "that the probable number of persons who were likely to partake of the entertainment would not be less than 10,000." This was the first calculation as to numbers, and had reference to the original resolution, which comprised the "poorer classes only." The next day, Thursday, June 7th, a Public Meeting was held at the Town Hall, the Mayor in the chair, when the previous resolutions of the Committee were read and approved. It was moved by Mr. Searle and seconded by Dr. Haviland,—" That any subscriptions that may be raised, be for the equal benefit of all persons living in the town who may please to accept of it." The effect of this resolution did not seem to be noticed at the time, but it virtually rescinded the original resolution of the Committee; and the consequence was, that by this general invitation, the number of applications from every parish increased; so that, instead of 10,000 persons, the returns soon swelled to 14,000. This caused considerable difficulty and difference of opinion in the Committee, and various expedients were proposed to remove them, but ultimately the question was left open; and all those who choosed to avail themselves of the opportunity to dine, were admitted. The provision Committees were, however, compelled to provide for this extra number, and the tables which were not originally intended to hold more than 12,000 were somewhat extended to meet the increased numbers. Most of the parochial Committees were now busily engaged collecting subscriptions; though some had as yet done nothing. Up to this period the general expectation was, that the entertainments, of whatever kind, were to be given either in districts or parishes. The resolution of the Committee, "That it was impracticable to have one general Entertainment on Parker's Piece" was adopted chiefly on the ground of expense; it being calculated that, to provide tables to entertain 12,000 persons, would cost not less than £300, being nearly one-third of the sum which it was expected would be raised by subscription. If this had really been the case, it would have been highly unjustifiable on the part of the Committee, to have crippled the funds to this extent; but circumstances soon transpired which convinced me, that the calculation as to the expense of the tables was altogether erroneous.

Moreover, public attention was strongly directed to this object, and it was soon obvious, that by far the greater number, both of subscribers and others, were in favour of "a General Dinner on Parker's Piece." At this juncture Mr. Bond's plan came out, and public attention was immediately drawn to it. It is due to this gentleman to state, and the Secretary records it with pleasure, although the contrary has been asserted, that the whole merit of originating this plan belongs to him. It will be in the recollection of some gentlemen that it was produced by me at the first meeting of the Committee, and mentioned as the plan of Mr. Bond. It was however soon laid aside, and very little attention given to it, for at that period it was considered impracticable. However, the time was now come when it was decided to be practicable, notwithstanding the opinion and resolution of the Committee to the contrary. "Where there is a will, there is a way;" and the public opinion was too strong to be trifled with. This led to a crisis; and although at the first public meeting, which was thinly attended, when the question was discussed, there was a majority against dining on Parker's Piece, it was quite clear that the impression on the meeting was, that it was objectionable chiefly on the ground of expense. If that difficulty were removed, there could be no question but that the majority would be in its favour.

This was sufficiently obvious at the meeting of the Committee on Wednesday, the 13th of June, when the report of subscriptions from the different parishes was brought up, by which it appeared, that upwards of £920 was already subscribed; and allowing the Colleges to contribute only £100, it was thought the subscriptions would be at least £1,200, and this has since been realized, with a surplus of £100 over, besides about £250 raised by admission tickets,* which will more than pay for the tables, rotunda, &c. Calculating, therefore, upon the data already mentioned, it is pretty certain that the "Dinner on Parker's Piece" was not an impracticable scheme, but one which was very likely to be soon realized. The question underwent a full discussion at this meeting, in which the Chairman, Mr. Stevenson, Rev. F. Hose, Mr. Beales, Alderman Nutter, and others, opposed the idea of a dinner on Parker's Piece—arguing that the people would be much more comfortable in parishes or districts than in one general entertainment. The objections as to the chances of weather were strongly insisted on, and above all, it was urged, that there was a greater probability of intemperance and excess at so large a meeting, than there could be in districts or parishes. Those who have witnessed the dinner are fully aware how unfounded were these notions. In order to strengthen the arguments of those who were unfavourable to the "General Dinner," it was hinted that the Masters of several Colleges would not subscribe, unless the entertainment were given in districts or parishes, and that several individuals who had subscribed would withdraw their subscriptions. Besides which, fears were expressed that it would not be safe to have so large a concourse of people together; riots might ensue, and who could tell what would be the consequence? Those who argued in this manner either little knew, or less appreciated the feelings of the English people, to suppose for a moment that on such an occasion there could be any danger of this kind. Give John Bull a good belly-full, and he is seldom disposed to be riotous, unless very much imposed upon; and the history of that day, whether at Cambridge or any other place, has completely scattered such idle prophecies to the wind. These arguments were, however, answered at the time, by Alderman R. Foster, Mr. Warren, Mr. Brimley, myself and others, who maintained that no danger, either of riot or intemperance was to be apprehended from so large an assemblage: on the contrary, if all classes dined together, there would be a sufficient check to prevent any intemperance or excess; besides which, that self-respect which actuates all classes, would operate strongly on the lower, when surrounded by their friends and neighbours, as well as their superiors. Which arguments were correct, and which fallacious, the event has sufficiently proved. The question was ultimately put "whether a call of the subscribers should be held on Thursday, to decide the place of dinner, &c." This was carried by a majority of three to one. Those who wish to see more at length the arguments, pro. and con., of this meeting, are referred to the Independent Press, June 16th, where they will find a full report of this and the previous, as well as subsequent meetings. Up to this period no symptoms of party feeling had been exhibited, except by the writer in the Chronicle before alluded to; those who voted for the general dinner being nearly equal of both parties; it was evidently, therefore, at this time, no party question; but circumstances soon occurred which showed a disposition, on the part of some of the leading Conservatives, to make it a party question.

On Thursday evening, at seven, a meeting of subscribers was held at the Town Hall, in accordance with the resolution of the previous day. The room was nearly filled, upwards of 500 persons being present—G. Fisher, Esq., in the chair. Letters were read by the Chairman from Mr. Pemberton, Mr. Okes, and Mr. Geo. Twiss, objecting to the dinner being held otherwise than in parishes or districts. It is presumed this was done to influence the meeting, and to prevent the “Dinner on Parker’s Piece.” The reading of these letters, however, only produced a smile. After a stormy discussion, in which Alderman R. Foster, Messrs. Brimley, Bridges, Crisp, Ashton, and others, supported the motion for a general dinner, and the Chairman, Mr. Bartlett, Captain Purchas, Mr. Deighton, and others, opposed it, (and after candles had been brought in, it being too dark to see the show of hands without,) the question was put, and carried by a majority of nearly 100 to one—only six or seven hands being held up against it. The point was now virtually settled; but some Conservative gentlemen were yet determined, if possible, to stop the tide of popular opinion,—they might as well have tried to stop the Thames in its course with their hands.

A meeting of Conservatives was immediately held at the Eagle, when it was resolved “to adhere to the original resolution of dining in parishes or districts.” How it was possible to come to such a resolution, after witnessing so general a demonstration of public feeling, these gentlemen can best answer. Nor was this feeling confined to one party only; for it is notorious, that at the public meeting, nine-tenths of the Conservatives present voted for the "Dinner on Parker's Piece," otherwise the result of the division could not possibly have been what it was. There can be only one mode of accounting for this—by supposing that some gentlemen might have altered their minds between the time of meetings at the Town Hall and the Eagle, although the meeting at the Eagle was held directly after the one at the Town Hall broke up; but these are anomalies for them to explain; the fact being as here stated. This resolution, however, which was so precipitately adopted, was as suddenly abandoned. Another meeting was held at the Eagle, on Friday evening, June 15, at six, called by hand-bills, as a "meeting of the Conservatives." Why all these meetings at the Eagle, unless for the purpose, if possible, of making it a party question?—Perhaps these gentlemen can explain. This meeting was fully attended, upwards of two hundred persons being present, and the question of yielding to the public wish for a general dinner, was put and carried by a majority of nearly two to one. There was now no alternative but to surrender to public opinion;—and Captain Purchas, with Mr. Bartlett, were deputed by the meeting at the Eagle to communicate this agreeable intelligence to the meeting which was held at the Town Hall the same evening at seven. On this occasion the Mayor was in the chair, who congratulated the meeting on the propriety and good feeling which induced the gentlemen at the Eagle to come to such a decision. The minutes of the previous meeting were then read by the Secretary. Alderman R. Foster moved,—“That the original resolution, which had been passed by the Committee, of dividing the company into districts, be rescinded.” This was carried unanimously. Alderman Bridges next moved,—“That the dinner to be given to the poor, to celebrate the Coronation of her Majesty, be held on Parker's Piece.” This was also carried unanimously. From this period there was a general scramble for honours. Many who had come in at the eleventh hour were anxious to eclipse those who had been labouring hard from the beginning. To the honour of the majority of the Conservatives be it recorded, that they were from the first anxious and willing to do that which the majority of the public were desirous of having done. Let us review what would have been the consequences had a division occurred at this period, instead of a union. The utmost amount of subscriptions that could have been withdrawn by the Conservatives at this period would not have exceeded £200; and such was the ardour, zeal, and liberality of those who wished the public to have a dinner in their own way, that numbers offered to double their subscriptions; and one family alone was good for another hundred pounds; there could have been no question, therefore, about money, even had these subscriptions been withdrawn. However, the maxim “be wise in time” was happily not lost sight of. After this period, subscriptions and offers of gratuitous assistance flowed in from all quarters. The master builders, particularly, were the first not only to lend deals, but to superintend the erection of tables, seats, rotunda, &c.; and some of the merchants were equally liberal, all the particulars of which will appear in the Appendix; for it is only doing these gentlemen justice thus to record to posterity their very handsome conduct on this occasion. Mr. Bond’s plan for the tables has been before alluded to. This plan was subsequently improved by Mr. Hillman, who introduced more tables; and ultimately the plan which has been adopted was agreed upon by Mr. Hollingsworth and Mr. Hillman, with Mr. Bond’s consent. The plan will be found at the beginning of this work. Another very ingenious plan was drawn by Mr. Hollingsworth, the surveyor, which consisted of tables formed in circles, at equal distances. There is no question but that this plan would contain more persons in a given area than any other; but the objection is, half the company would necessarily be placed back to back, a position which would have debarred half from seeing the rotunda, circle, &c. This will sufficiently explain why the other plan was preferred. But there was no rivalry amongst the professional gentlemen on this occasion; for both Mr. Hollingsworth and Mr. Hillman co-operated together, and were personally active night and day in carrying out the design for the tables.

On Monday, June 18, a general meeting of the Committee was held at the Town Hall, G. Fisher, Esq., in the chair, when Mr. Bond offered to "provide for and undertake the erection of the tables and forms free of expense to the Committee," in which offer the Secretary joined as guarantee;—this was accepted, and a "vote of thanks passed to Messrs. Bond and Hallack for their liberality." It must be understood, that this offer was made on the condition, that the builders and merchants before alluded to would lend deals, &c., and assist in carrying out this onerous undertaking by sending their men (which of course were to be paid), and themselves superintending the erection of the work. This engagement was most honourably fulfilled on the part of those builders who undertook it; and as to Mr. Bond, his exertions were indefatigable; there he was at his post, early and late, with Messrs. Hollingsworth and Hillman; and it is impossible to overrate the activity of these gentlemen, or the builders. In a very short time the tables were erected, notwithstanding continual interruptions from the unsettled state of the weather; and the rotunda and every thing was completed on the Wednesday evening before the day of the Coronation.

The Secretary, at this meeting, read over a plan and names for the formation of the different Committees. Mr. Deck had been previously entrusted with the entire management of the Fireworks, and a sum of sixty pounds placed at his disposal, to carry out, with proper effect, the necessary duties of his department. It could not possibly have been in better hands, and the result of the exhibition fully justified the Committee in leaving this department in the hands of that able artist.

The following are the names of the Committees, as read over in order by the Secretary. Those who were proposed at the time, or afterwards added, are distinguished by an asterisk. The whole are taken from my pencil memoranda.

THE TABLE COMMITTEE.

Messrs. Bond, Hollingsworth, Hillman, Bell, Collin, Morehen, *Rev. F. Hose, *the Mayor.

THE MEAT COMMITTEE.

Messrs. Warren, Rowley, M. Headly, Fellowes, Wicks, *Shippey, *Pryor, *Harvey, *Fuller, *Dickerson, *Fuller, *Lawrence, *King, *Peeling, *Wilson, *Hudson, *Rushbrook, *Wicks, Barlow, *Lenton.

PUDDING COMMITTEE.

Hallack, Lenton, Jas. Law, jun., Warwicker, C. Brown.

BEER COMMITTEE.

Bacon, T. Nutter, Eddlestone, H. S. Foster, Beales, Skrine, Hopkins, Litchfield, *Salmon.

TICKET COMMITTEE.

Adcock, Ashton, Rev. G. Spence, Rev. T. Boodle, Bishop, Beales, *Captain Purchas, *Rev. T. Webster, *Knightly, *J. J. Deighton, *E. Foster, jun., Alderman Headly, Alderman R. Foster.

BREAD COMMITTEE.

Crisp, Elliston, Hunnybun, W. Swann, jun., Barrett, Wiseman, H. Rowe, Bentley, Rowell, Francis.

MUSIC COMMITTEE.

Prof. Walmisley, Alderman Headly, Skrine, H. S. Foster, J. J. Deighton, Alderman Newby, Alderman Nutter, C. Foster, Wood, Rance.

BALLOON COMMITTEE.

Deck, Alderman Grafton.

SPORTS' COMMITTEE.

Alderman Bridges, Deck, *Dr. Woodhouse, Litchfield, T. Nutter, *Bartlett, T. Willmott.

TOBACCO AND SNUFF COMMITTEE.

Bacon, Wells, Healey, Golland.

TABLE CLOTH COMMITTEE.

Livett, Hubbard, Elliston, T. Bond, Dennis, *S. Turner.

TASTE AND FLOWERS' COMMITTEE.

Searle, Hudson, Livett, Green, Haylock, Catling, R. Nutter, Alderman Newby.

ADMISSION TICKET COMMITTEE.

*Alderman R. Foster, *T. Nutter, *H. Marshall, jun., *G. Fisher, Esq., *J. Peters, *Rowe, *Harraden, *Hallack.

With power to add to their numbers.

The entire management of every thing, in their different departments, was left with these Committees. Immediately after the Committees were appointed, they adjourned to the Large Room, and placing themselves at different tables, at once went to work. They began making calculations as to the various probable quantities which would be required in each department; they provided themselves with books, to enter the various minutiae, and the different orders and regulations adopted by each Committee. For full particulars of the proceedings of these Sub-Committees, the reader is referred to the Appendix. At this meeting of the General Committee, Mr. Beales was elected Deputy Chairman and Treasurer, and immediately afterwards Mr. Stevenson was chosen Assistant Secretary. This latter gentleman was proposed and seconded by two friends of mine, and it was taken for granted that it was with my consent. But truth compels me to declare, not a hint was given me beforehand of their intentions; and the Secretary admits, that he was completely taken by surprise; and, for once, so much lost his presence of mind, as not to be able to utter a word. Had the subject been mentioned privately, he would never have consented to it. The very idea of assistance implies a want of competency in those to whom it is offered, or a want of confidence on the part of those who offer it. But there was a meaning in this—though the gentlemen who proposed and seconded Mr. Stevenson were not aware of it.—It was evident now that the honours were to be divided. The intentions of those gentlemen who proposed Mr. Stevenson were no doubt of the kindest nature. It was, perhaps, thought the Secretary had undertaken too much; and that assistance was necessary to enable him to go through with his undertaking. But had he shown any symptoms of want of power or capability, either physically or mentally, of carrying out the duties of his office? Would it not have been time enough when he had asked for assistance, to have afforded it? But, no;—this was not waited for. Let it not for a moment be thought that in these observations any unkind or personal feeling is intended towards Mr. Stevenson; on the contrary—of that gentleman's assistance and powers as a man of business the Secretary entertains the highest opinion; but he did not feel the want of assistance, and had he done so, it would have been easy for him to obtain it.

At this meeting the following resolutions were unanimously passed by the Committee:—

“That the Minister and Churchwardens of each parish be requested to form parochial Sub-Committees, in order to make such local arrangements in regard to the distribution of tickets as may be fitting, in communication with, and under the general superintendence of the Ticket Committee.”

“That the Sub-Committees be requested to ascertain, in the best way they are able, the number of persons in their respective parishes who will attend the dinner, and report the same to the Committee on Thursday next.”

“That the limitation of tickets, as to residents, be to such as have resided 14 days previously to the Festival.”

“That children of all ages be admitted; separate seats for the children of Sunday Schools be provided; and all other children remain under the care of their parents or friends, who shall be responsible for their conduct and safety."

"That the Parish Committees be requested to complete the collection of subscriptions in their respective parishes at their earliest convenience, and report the final sum to the General Committee on Friday next."

"That a deputation of the General Committee wait upon the Mayor and Magistrates, to request that no booths be allowed to be erected, and no liquor sold on the Piece, except under the direction and with the sanction of the Committee; and that no horses or carriages be allowed to come on the Piece."

"That the only toast to be given at the dinner be 'THE QUEEN.'"

"That a general programme of the entire arrangements, when completed, be printed and extensively circulated through the town."

"That with the ticket for admission there be given to each individual a printed paper of directions, stating the hour of admission and the place of location, with such other directions and particulars as may be necessary for preventing confusion."

It was also agreed, that the Chairman, the Deputy Chairman, the Secretary, and Assistant Secretary, be entitled to attend the meetings of the Sub-Committees, by virtue of their offices.

"That in order to prevent any irregularity or misunderstanding in the delivery of all articles of consumption, &c., none shall be allowed, without an order previously signed by the Chairman, Deputy Chairman, Secretary, or Assistant Secretary; and no order shall be deemed valid without such signatures."

At the close of this morning's meeting, the Secretary invited several members of the Committee to taste a "trial plum pudding," which trial pudding he had caused to be made for several previous days, in different ways, in order to ascertain the best and cheapest mode of producing a given result. Whether he has succeeded or not, those who tasted the puddings at the dinner are the best judges. Suffice it to say that, though scores of persons tasted them before, and thousands at the dinner, he has not yet heard any one complain of the quality; and yet the price of these puddings was not more than threepence per pound. This shows what may be done by attending to the minutiae. [For full particulars of this, see Appendix.] It will be recollected that nearly all the Committees were now appointed, and it was agreed that one of them, the "Admission Ticket Committee," should adjourn after this meeting to decide upon the "best design for the tickets." Two designs of Mr. Harraden's, and one of Mr. Roe's, were presented to the General Committee. Mr. Harraden's were merely rough sketches, and therefore their merit could not be so well appreciated. Mr. Roe's was more finished. The feeling of the meeting was evidently in favour of Mr. Roe's, which, besides the advantage of being better finished, had the additional one of a "view of the tables," which certainly was the best part of it. The likenesses, of her Majesty, it is admitted, were any thing but like; and the heraldic blunder which was committed, by enclosing the "motto of the Order of the Garter" in an annular ring, was too palpable not to be noticed. Mr. Roe engraved one plate and Mr. Peters the other. In the engraving which Mr. Peters presented to the Committee, this error was corrected; but it must be admitted that the engravings do but little credit to the artists; and yet no blame attaches to them, they not having sufficient time to execute them properly. The origin of these engraved cards requires a little explanation. On Saturday morning, the 16th of June, Mr. Peters accosted me thus:—"if you will get a design, I will give the Committee an engraving;" adding, "Mr. Harraden gave the design for the Peace Festival cards of admission,—but there is no time to lose." This liberal offer was not to be trifled with, and the Secretary went immediately to Mr. Harraden's, without the slightest idea of usurping the Chairman's prerogative. It appears, however, that the Chairman was by no means pleased with this forwardness of the Secretary, which he did not fail to express at the first interview. However, it was only to ask a friend for a design, not to fix on one. The Committee for choosing the design adjourned to Mr. Roe's after the meeting broke up. All were there (as well as some others who were not on the Committee) except the Secretary and Mr. Harraden, and this latter gentleman was not even asked to be present, though within three doors of the spot—a slight which he certainly felt: nor was any communication made to him of the rejection of his designs, though the Secretary requested the Chairman to go at once and inform Mr. Harraden. This was declined, and a note ordered to be sent; but no notice was sent to that gentleman, that the Secretary is aware of. The Committee had decided on Mr. Roe's design before the Secretary had time to get there, which was not more than a quarter of an hour; and he immediately protested against the decision, particularly on the ground that the Chairman would have his name alone engraved on the card. The Secretary contended that the Mayor was the only person who had a right to have his name engraved on the card, and if that were done, he should be content; and this was in conformity with the precedent of the Peace Festival, Sir John Mortlock's name being on that card, signed as "Chairman of the Committee," but of right, because he was Mayor, and Chairman of the Dinner, as well as the Committee; therefore the case of the present Chairman of Committee was not parallel; and if Mr. George Fisher's name was to be engraved and handed down to posterity in this manner, the Secretary's name ought to be also inserted under that of the Chairman.

This discussion caused some unpleasantness, and the Secretary did not attend the evening meeting, nor the early part of the next morning's Committee. However, a negotiation took place, and Mr. Fisher consented to have the Mayor's name on the card with his own, which after all was not placed as it ought to have been—as “Chairman of the Committee,” but Chairman only; and yet it was agreed to follow the precedent of the Peace Festival. The Secretary’s name was not allowed to be put upon the card, and he, therefore, takes this mode of perpetuating his share in these transactions by writing this book—in which he, in his turn, declines the honour of having any names quartered with his. From this period there was no more cordiality between the Chairman and Secretary. The former engrossed all the functions of the latter; and not content with exercising his own judicial duties, he went so far as to undertake the Secretary’s ministerial part of his office, by signing his name as Chairman to all documents, even the notices for meetings of Committee. Thus was the Secretary treated.

The following day, June 19th, a general meeting of the Committee was held at the Town Hall as usual, George Fisher, Esq. in the Chair. Several orders were passed for printing certain notices of the proceedings; Mr. Abbott and Mr. F. D. Barker were added to the Ticket Committee; and Mr. Deck, who had been previously entrusted with the sole management of the fireworks, had the following gentlemen associated with him as a Committee:—Rev. F. Hose, Mr. Warwicker, Mr. H. Rowe, Mr. C. Brown, Alderman Newby, and Alderman Grafton.

On Wednesday, June 20th, the General Committee again met at the Town Hall, Geo. Fisher, Esq. in the Chair. At this meeting the Ticket Committee recommended 360 wands 6 feet long, to be provided for the Stewards of the dinner, and white rosettes for the Stewards, Carvers, and Waiters.”—Mr. Matthew offered to provide mustard and salt-pots for all the tables, and place them on the tables, being paid prime cost for the mustard, &c., and also for the breakage; this most liberal offer was accepted, and a vote of thanks given to that gentleman for his kindness.—The Meat Committee brought up their report, recommending the purchase of upwards of 1000 stone of meat of different kinds—[For particulars of which see Appendix.] Mr. W. Warren was Chairman of this Committee, and his active services, together with the other gentlemen who were with him, cannot be too highly appreciated.—When it is considered how warm and close the weather was during this period, it reflects the highest credit on these gentlemen, that not a single joint was in the least injured. To the credit, too, of the cooks of the various Colleges who were on this Committee, and who dressed the meat, no one could say it was done too much or too little. This whole department, which required considerable care and skill, was managed admirably. Now we are on the subject of Committees, we will mention the Pudding Committee, as coming next to the meat; and here the greatest praise is due to Mr. Lenton, cook of Christ's, who undertook and actually made the whole of the puddings, 1650 in number, at the College kitchen. This was the most onerous undertaking for one individual, of any that I am acquainted with. These were boiled at different places,—two coppers, Mr. Elliston's and Mr. J. M. Foster's, holding about 400 each. The milk was obtained from Cottenham, Willingham, &c., and, being genuine, added materially to the quality. When mixed up together in the large mash-tubs, they looked like custards filled with plums. The ingredients will be found in the Appendix. The Beer Committee comes next, and they certainly furnished an excellent supply of beer, both in quantity and quality. The whole was drawn off clear just before 11 o'clock, and arranged in different places between the tables; and the brewers, like the grocers, charged the article supplied at cost price. In short, to sum up the whole, every Committee did its duty.

It was agreed by the General Committee that, in conformity with the original resolution of affording assistance to those who were not able to attend the dinner, the sum of two shillings be allowed to each man or woman, and one shilling to each child, who were prevented by illness or otherwise from being present. These sums were given by the various parochial Committees the day after or on the day of the Festival. Mr. Wagstaff made a present of four barrels of ale for the use of the Festival; and it was also announced that the Syndics of the University Press would print 20,000 copies of the verses to be sung as graces before and after dinner; this most liberal offer, which was valued at £15, was accepted with thanks. It was also agreed that Mr. Green, the aeronaut, should ascend with his balloon—the fee for which was 70 guineas; and the Balloon Committee were authorized to hire 50 men, and to provide ropes and stakes to protect the balloon from injury. The Sports' Committee had the sum of £30 voted for their department, which was under the special management of Alderman Bridges. It was arranged, that in case the morning of the Coronation day should be wet up to ten o'clock, the Festival was to be postponed till Friday. Happily no necessity occurred for this postponement. The tickets for admission were issued by the different Parochial Committees, who first went round and ascertained the number of persons in each family, and then distributed the tickets at their houses. It is to be hoped, that on any future distribution of tickets, whether for coals, bread, or soup, as the case may be, the same plan will be adopted; then there will be no more ticket-hunting—a practice which the Secretary always opposed, and which the Rev. G. Spence and the Rev. T. Boodle, who were on the Ticket Committee, took special care to prevent. To those gentlemen particularly the public are indebted for their exertions in this department.

At this meeting Mr. Titterton, the Superintendent of the Police force, was ordered to provide 200 special constables to prevent persons from passing over the ropes, and assist in different ways to preserve order. The Committee also came to the resolution, that tickets be provided for beer, and that the allowance be three pints to a man, one pint to a woman, and half a pint to children; but this limit was not strictly adhered to ; for it may be fairly said, that every one had as much beer as he thought proper, and nobody appeared to have too much. On Tuesday, June the 26th, the General Committee met; when the Secretary was absent for some time in the Commissioners' room. On the previous day, Monday, the 25th, the Secretary informed Mr. Stevenson and J. J. Deighton, that it was his intention to publish an account of the proceedings ; and that intention he had communicated to a printer and publisher immediately after he was appointed Secretary. Notwithstanding this, and during his absence, and without giving him the  slightest intimation of their intentions, the Rev. G. Spence moved, and Mr. Abbott seconded, the following resolution,—“ That it is highly desirable to preserve and perpetuate a record of the principal proceedings connected with the approaching Festival, to be printed and published for the gratification of the inhabitants of the town and neighbourhood, and the information of posterity. That a Committee of seven be appointed, for the purpose of preparing an impartial and complete account of the origin and progress of the proceedings on this interesting occasion, illustrated with such plans and drawings as shall be thought fit, with a view to publication ; and that notice thereof be immediately published.” There could have been no objection to this motion if the Secretary's name had been left out of this Committee.

But to place an individual on a Committee against his consent, and in spite of his personal protest, and retain his name after he requested it to be withdrawn, is an act which no men of proper feelings ought to have done. All this was evidently an attempt to prevent the Secretary from publishing. But the public shall judge, and decide whether, after such improper conduct on the part of some gentlemen, the Secretary has not done right in recording these facts.

At length the important day arrived, to which the anxious hopes and expectations of millions had long been directed.

The morning was hazy, but to the cognoscenti it predicted a fine day. The town was alive at an early hour ; bells ringing, cannons firing, and the people moving about to and fro in all directions, in their holiday clothes, betokened a more than ordinary degree of anticipation and enjoyment.—Nor were these anticipations and these hopes to be disappointed. A more favourable day, and one more auspicious for the occasion, could not have happened. The scene of attraction, Parker's Piece, was soon thronged with company from all parts of the country, anxious spectators of the immense preparations for the Festival. Between twelve and one the different parishes mustered their forces, anxious to commence an attack on the good old English fare, roast beef and plum pudding, which was amply provided for the guests on this occasion.

The Waiters had gone forward some time earlier, to assist in unloading, and placing on the tables, the one thousand and twenty joints of meat of various kinds, and the ninety-nine barrels of ale which graced this Festival, as well as the numerous jars of pickles, nearly one thousand in number—the quantity of which was 125 gallons. Mr. Matthew, who, it will be recollected, had engaged to provide all the mustard-pots and salt-plates, and to place them on the tables, was at his post ; and upwards of 1400 of these necessary articles were placed by, and under the superintendence of, that gentleman. Messrs. Shippey also furnished the mugs and jars for the pickles, &c. ; and these were placed under the management of those gentlemen. Messrs. Barrett also very liberally lent the plates for the puddings, upwards of 1600, and dishes for the meat, 500 ; the remainder being supplied from the different Colleges where the meat was cooked. About half-past one most of the parishes were seated ; and it was really a beautiful sight to see them come up in double files, headed by the Minister or Churchwardens, or other functionaries chosen for the occasion, each preceded by its parochial banners, most of which were new for the occasion, with appropriate inscriptions, according to the taste of the parishes. Some of these flags were really handsome; and, when placed in their different positions they "fluttered in the breeze," the effect was altogether such as to "be duly appreciated must have been seen." The particulars of these flags, and their various colours and mottos, will be found in the Appendix. The Sunday School children had also their flags; the teachers were distinguished by a white rosette; and the appearance of these children, when seated at the circular tables round the orchestra, was in the highest degree interesting. The plan of bringing up the different parishes in double files, and the numbering the tables, as well as apportioning them to the different parishes, had been suggested by the Secretary some days previous to the Festival; and though a Committee was appointed to carry out these necessary arrangements, by which alone order and regularity were secured, no deviation from the plans proposed was made that the Secretary is aware of. For the utility and propriety of this, the Rev. T. Boodle and Capt. Purchas can vouch.

About two o'clock the first cargo of plum puddings arrived on the Piece. These were destined (170 in number) to be placed on the tables of the Sunday School children, as it was desirable that these children should be first supplied.—This was according to the previous arrangements of the "Pudding Committee." Unfortunately this first cargo did not arrive at its destined port—the manager being absent from his post by accident. These puddings being appropriated to other tables, in part prevented that order and regularity in the delivery of the rest, which would have ensued. The whole of the parties where the puddings were boiled, had written instructions describing the numbers of the tables they were to supply, and the routes by which they were to enter. These orders were signed by the Secretary, Mr. Law, and Mr. Warwicker, and had they been strictly followed, the whole thing would have gone off with the regularity of a piece of mechanism. However, the mistake was rectified as well as could be; and by degrees all parties had their proper quantum of pudding, either before meat, or after.

THE DINNER.

At two o'clock, on the announcement of the Mayor, the following grace, to the tune of The Old Hundredth, was sung by the choristers in the orchestra, accompanied by the band, which was admirably conducted by Professor Walmisley:—

Praise God from whom all blessings flow;
 Praise Him, all creatures here below;
 Praise Him above, ye heavenly host;
 Praise Father, Son, and Holy Ghost.

Immediately the Presidents, Vice Presidents, and the other carvers, commenced their operations, and the work of demolition now went rapidly on. Pudding after pudding disappeared in quick succession, and the various joints of meat, which before seemed so large and numerous, were soon reduced in their dimensions. However, there was enough and to spare; and many a rustic, before the tables were cleared, had the pleasure of tasting the Coronation beef, pudding, and bread, as well as ale.

About half-past two, a fine fat sheep, the gift of Mr. Crabb, which was roasted whole at Mr. Crisford's, Bull Inn, was carried up to a table erected for the purpose in front of the Rotunda. The cook at the Bull, Mr. H. Over, who roasted the mutton, had the honour of carving it—assisted by Mr. Lawrence and Mr. Glasscock. The Mayor and hundreds of ladies and gentlemen were helped to small slices of this mutton, and pronounced it to be very fine. The Secretary cannot do better here than borrow a description of the scene from the “Independent Press,” the Editor of which has given a description of the whole proceeding in his happiest style.

“Never was banquet but half so numerous, half so well arranged. There may have been more splendid ones, but a happier were impossible. There was abundance of room, no lack of anything that could contribute to the comfort and pleasure of the guests, and all around was good humour, happy faces, and sunshine. The coup-d-œil from the promenade of the rotunda was spirit-stirring in the extreme ; and the view of this eminence from the plain beneath, crowded as it was with the elegantly-dressed beauty of Cambridge and its vicinity, was also splendid and beautiful. After dinner the following verses were sung, like the former one, to the tune of The Old Hundredth.—These verses were composed by the Rev. G. Spence, Alderman R. Foster, and a Committee appointed for the purpose of arranging the graces to be sung before and after dinner:—

“ O King of Kings, thy blessing shed
On our anointed Sovereign’s head ;
And, looking from thy throne in heaven,
Protect the crown thyself hath given.

Her, for thy sake, may we obey,
Uphold her right, and love her sway ;
Remembering—all the powers that be,
Are ministers ordained by thee.

By her, this favoured nation bless :
To her wise counsels give success ;
In peace, and war, thy powers be seen ;
Confirm her strength :—O save our Queen.

And, when all earthly thrones decay,
And earthly glories fade away,
Give her a nobler throne on high,
A crown of immortality.

“A grand overture and chorus, by Professor Walmisley, was then given by the Choristers of Trinity and King’s Colleges, the members of the Choral Society, and the Band, which was universally admired as a composition of great brilliancy and force. The words of the chorus were as follows:—

“All hail to our fair, our illustrious Queen!
May her glories be bright, and her days be serene:
May remotest of countries re-echo her fame,
And our national toast be Victoria’s name!

“The Queen’s health having been announced by the Mayor, and given with deafening cheers, the National Anthem was struck up, and joined in by the assembled multitude, standing up. The singing in this anthem, as well as in the strains before and after dinner, of so many thousand voices, blending in unison with the very numerous and efficient band, and especially those of the Charity School children, had a beautifully happy and sublime effect. The fragments of the banquet having been removed for the use of the poor on the next day, fresh ale was sent round the tables, and pipes and tobacco were introduced.”

The fumes of the tobacco soon spread their fragrance all around; and although some delicate individuals might feel somewhat of the effect, this was not for a moment to be put in comparison with the pleasure afforded to the many by a pipe of good shag.

About 5 o’clock the Mayor, and the principal part of the company, adjourned to Midsummer Common, where Rustic Sports had been provided for the gratification of those who delighted in such amusements.

There were donkey races, boys running for waistcoats, dipping for eels and oranges, jingling matches, soap-tailed-pigs, and high poles with hats on the top, but so soaped that no climber was able to reach the top and win the hats; grinning through horse-collars, and various other devices to keep up good humour, and to please the natives; for after all, though fond of good feeding, John Bull is also very fond of Rustic Sports.

The whole of the Sports were under the able management of Alderman Bridges, whose vein for humour, fun, and frolic is sufficiently notorious. About a quarter past six o'clock, a fine Balloon was sent off. Mr. Green, of Vauxhall, was the aeronaut. The Balloon was 60 feet high, and took 180,000 gallons of gas to fill it. Mr. Green was accompanied by his wife; and the ascent was one of the most beautiful that was ever witnessed. At first the Balloon took a northerly direction, but after it had attained a certain altitude, it appeared for a considerable time quite stationary and completely over the heads of the multitude who were assembled to witness the Sports. After some time it veered in a south-easterly direction, and ultimately descended in the neighbourhood of Fulbourn. Some disappointment was felt at the Balloon going off so early, the hand-bills containing the programme of the proceedings having stated the hour of ascent to be seven o'clock. But the time fixed by the committee, and entered in the minute book, was six o'clock, therefore the blame, if any, rests with those who drew up the hand-bill, and copied incorrectly the time. But it was a matter of trifling importance, except that many persons were debarred the pleasure of witnessing the ascent—having gone home to take a refreshing cup of tea, relying on the time being correctly stated in the programme. The Sports on the Common were continued till nearly nine, about which time the company moved off to the next scene of attraction, the FIRE-WORKS.

The spot chosen by Mr. Deck and the Committee for this exhibition, was close to the quick on the right-hand side of Mill-road, and, being elevated, afforded the best possible view which the spectators could desire. Besides, there was abundance of space, both in front and on both sides the platform on which the fire-works were placed. The exhibition was, perhaps, the best that was ever witnessed in Cambridge. The rockets were particularly fine; and the loud clapping of hands, and the shouts which arose from the immense concourse of spectators, proved abundantly they were satisfied.

Thus closed a day memorable on every account; and a day that never will be forgotten. It has been calculated that 35,000 persons were present. It is the Secretary's opinion, that the numbers were nearly 40,000. There were 15,000 who dined, including all ages. There must have been upwards of 1,000 in the capacity of Stewards and Waiters. The company in the Rotunda and within the circles cannot be estimated at less than 4,000. And, considering the immense extent of the outer area, which was nearly half-a-mile in circumference, and the depth of the multitude, adding to the number those who were stationed at the different houses, and platforms erected in gardens, &c., these, together, cannot be computed at less than 20,000—making the grand total of 40,000 persons! Such were the results of this glorious day—a day of which it may be truly said, there was nothing done that did not give satisfaction, and nothing left undone that caused regret.

In conclusion, the author may be permitted to apologize for any errors that have occurred in this work. Considering the hasty manner in which it has been got up—not a letter having been written for press before Monday last, and the whole finished by Friday noon, and having no help from any one, either in writing the matter or revising the press—he trusts the public will not look with too critical an eye on this performance: in short, it has been a race against time. For the book itself he makes no apology; the act is entirely his own; no one shall be blamed but himself; but if it should be read, and the public should think it worth preserving as a record of these transactions, the author will be abundantly satisfied.

But the Secretary need not have written against time, if he had known the paces of the seven, who have been preparing the “only authentic and authorized account of the Festival;” and he has delayed his second edition some two or three weeks, for the Audit Meeting of the General Committee, in order to give the correct balance, which, from the accounts published and signed by the Treasurer, (a copy of which is on the next page,) amounts to £65 5s. 10d. By this statement, the general subscriptions appear to be £1,421 14s. 4d., but the real amount of general subscriptions according to the parochial statements, and the sums received at the different banks, (if the Secretary is correct,) amounts to £1,458 2s. 1d., leaving an extra balance of upwards of Thirty-six Pounds unaccounted for. Perhaps this difference will be explained in the work about to emanate from the “Publication Committee.”

Every exertion has been made to obtain a list of subscriptions from the parish of St. Mary the Less, but without success: therefore the Secretary has been compelled to omit a great many names; and the blame must rest with those who refused to give the list. This is the only parish which refused to give a list of subscribers. Mr. Hazard was applied to on behalf of the Secretary for a list, and began to furnish one, but the moment he found for whom it was intended, he refused to give any information. The Secretary therefore records this act of civility.

APPENDIX—B.

LIST OF MERCHANTS, BUILDERS, &c.

Who lent Deals, Battens, Boards, &c. for the construction of the Tables, Rotunda, and Circles.

- Messrs. Foster & Son, 760 deals and battens
- Messrs. Bell & Son, 468 deals and battens; and these gentlemen completely erected fifteen tables, being one-fourth
- Mr. Morehen, 911 deals, battens, and boards
- Mr. Papworth, 300 deals and battens
- Mr. Watts, 240 deals and battens
- Mr. Whitaker, 190 deals and battens
- Mr. Beales, 100 deals
- Mr. Quinsee, 150 deals and battens
- Mr. Bradwell, 125 deals and battens
- Mr. Collin, 93 deals and battens
- Mr. Peck, 120 deals
- Messrs. Brown and Robinson, 70 deals
- Mr. Bennet, 102 boards
- Mr. Rigby, 45 deals and a quantity of ropes
- Messrs. Cross, King, and Meadows, a quantity of ropes

The whole of these gentlemen lent upwards of £3000 worth of property on this occasion. After the Festival the deals were sent home, and the posts, braces, &c. were sold by auction by Alderman Bridges, the net proceeds of which amount to upwards of £50: this will be in aid of the building fund, and the balance, if any, paid to the general fund. Of course the men employed were paid; and cartage, nails, &c. were a considerable item; but no charge was made either by the surveyor or builders for their valuable services. It is not to be presumed that the above can be quite accurate; but there will not be found any material variation, whenever the accounts are finally settled.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE MEAT COMMITTEE.

MR. W. WARREN, Chairman.

This Committee provided upwards of 1015 stone of Beef, Mutton, Pork, Veal and Bacon. This consisted of 1029 joints, and was cooked at the following places. The whole was bought of different Cambridge butchers, and the quality was such as the best judges pronounced to be excellent.

Too much praise cannot be given to the cooks who had the trouble of dressing the above: and the public are very much indebted to the Colleges who were kind enough to allow the use of the different kitchens on this occasion.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE PUDDING COMMITTEE.

MR. HALLACK, Chairman.

In the making up the 1650 puddings, the following articles were used:—10 sacks of the finest flour, 2475 pounds of raisins, 825 pounds of suet, 370 gallons of milk, and 3300 eggs. The calculation was 2lbs. of flour,  $1\frac{1}{2}$ lbs. of raisins,  $1\frac{1}{2}$  pints of milk, and 2 eggs to each pudding; which averaged, when boiled,  $6\frac{1}{2}$  pounds each. In making up such a quantity of materials, slight variations will occur, but nothing materially affecting the calculation. These puddings were all made at Christ kitchen, under the superintendence of Mr. Lenton, to whom the thanks of the whole town are justly due; not only did he superintend the making, but he assisted in getting them out of Mr. Elliston's large copper, holding about 400, and delivered them on the Pieces at the different tables. Mr. Law and Mr. Warwicker superintended the arrangements of the coppers where boiled, and also drew up the necessary orders to regulate the delivery at the tables, as well as other previous good services. The following are the places, and numbers, as nearly as may be, boiled at each. The gentlemen who allowed the use of the coppers are also entitled to the thanks of the public.

BEER COMMITTEE.

This Committee consisted of nine gentlemen, whose names have been already mentioned—Mr. Skrine. Chairman. After some discussion, it was agreed to supply the beer at cost price—40s. per barrel—and to be of the best quality. There being several large brewers on this Committee, it was agreed to give the offer of supplying the ale first to the lesser brewers, and what quantity they might decline to supply the brewers on the Committee were engaged to make good. To obviate any unpleasantness or doubt as to quality, Mr. Bacon, Mr. Skrine, and Mr. Litchfield were deputed to go round to the different persons who engaged to supply the beer, and ascertain by tasting, whether the quality was such as the public would approve. The result proves the correctness of the judgment of these gentlemen as to the quality of ale—not a single complaint having been heard in any instance. The very judicious precaution was adopted of having all the beer drawn off clear an hour or two previous to bringing it on the Piece. The following are the names of the persons who supplied the ale, with the quantities of each:

BREAD COMMITTEE.

This Committee consisted of ten gentlemen, whose duty was to provide a sufficient quantity of the best bread for the Festival; to have it cut, and placed on the tables. The quantity provided for the occasion was 4000 two-pound loaves: and this was founded on a calculation of half a pound of bread each person—men, women, and children. Less than this might have sufficed, for there was a considerable quantity left at every table. However, it was better to have too much than too little. The bread was supplied by the different bakers at the wholesale price, and every two-pound loaf cut into four. The following are the bakers who supplied the bread:—

Mr. Dearle	Mr. Wilderspin
Emmerson	Ingray
Greenwood	Livermore
Rayment	Shuker
Bowbank	Harris
Farrington	Dockerel
Tunwell	Francis
Knightly	Beales
Smith	Fuller
Livermore

TABLE-CLOTH COMMITTEE.

This Committee consisted of six gentlemen, whose names have been before mentioned. In addition to Messrs. Elliston, Hubbard, and Dennis, who took an active part in the management of this department, we omitted to record in our last edition that Mrs. Eaden, of Market-street, supplied 1733 yards of calico (more than half the quantity), and that Mr. Blunson, Mr. Goody, and others of her assistants, actually covered 40, out of the 60 long tables, with calico. The Secretary feels pleasure in correcting his former statement.

* Four of Mr. Wagstaff's barrels were a gift.

COMMITTEE OF TASTE AND FLOWERS.

Around the upper part of the Rotunda was a handsome pink drapery, over which were festoons formed of flowers and evergreens, mounted with nine flags. The like festoons were also tastefully suspended from the centre pole bearing the Royal Standard of England, forming a cupola over the orchestra, and the initials V. R. formed with flowers, with several other devices, were placed facing each of the four entrances. The effect was excellent; the entire credit of which is due to Mr. Livett and Mr. Catling, who planned and arranged the whole of the decorations. These gentlemen also distributed a profusion of flowers amongst the Ladies. The evergreens were supplied from the gardens and pleasure grounds of E. Foster, jun., Esq., Julian Skrine, Esq., Mr. Cracoe, Mr. Watford, and Captain Purchas. Mr. Ashton, as Secretary of the Horticultural Society, very kindly sent the flowers shown at the Town Hall the day previous, and Mr. Green supplied a basket of beautiful roses. This Committee also caused a battery of cannon to be planted on the west side of Parker's Piece, which, under the management of Mr. Edwin Dixon, fired a Royal salute soon after sun rise, and several times in the course of the day, not forgetting a discharge of twenty-one after the National Anthem. [For this corrected account of the proceedings of the Committee of Taste and Flowers, the Secretary is indebted to George Livett, Esq., Chairman of that Committee.]

THE RACES.

Friday being the day appointed for the Races, a course was staked out on the Common, commencing from the south end, and running in an opposite direction nearly to the top of the ground, when a turn was made of about 400 or 500 yards in length, which led down to the winning post, where Mr. Alderman Bridges and another umpire were stationed. This part of the course was roped in. The races were appointed to commence at two o'clock; but, in consequence of the inauspicious state of the weather (a thunder storm with a very heavy fall of rain having just taken place), it was deemed advisable to postpone them for some little time. In the meantime the sun put forth its beams, and restored joy and animation to the drooping hopes of contending sportsmen and their friends.

The Secretary begs to inform the Public, he has given them all the information that he could obtain from the different Parishes, as to Presidents, Vice-Presidents, Stewards, and Carvers. The authorities of St. Andrew the Less, did not wish to have any thing published, except by the General Committee; and no information could be obtained from St. Mary the Less. Why this was the case, the gentlemen of that Parish can best answer.
